A CHanneled READING FROM:

ROBIN WILLIAMS

FEBRUARY 6, 2023

“JUST BE BEAUTIFUL”

RECORDING TRANSCRIPTION

*BEFORE WE WENT into our usual six-minute meditation prior to our readings, one of the members jokingly said, “Nancy, I’m putting in my request for you to channel Robin Williams.” I laughed and responded with, “I don’t think it works like that.”

‘I don’t know where this is going, but here goes, and I’ll start with what I got. You know that when I go into meditation, I always ask that whoever wants to come work with me to please step forward and tonight, I added, “but tonight I have a special request from my friend. So, Mr. Williams, if you want to step in and work with me, that would be great.” Then all of a sudden, I am hearing, “Nanu, Nanu, everybody!” Then he said, “Hey, I take requests.”

Let me try to get a better connection with him now because he moves fast. I am asking him to tell me something I don’t already know. I just heard him say, “I bit my nails.”

What!? Did he?

Ok, seriously Robin, tell me something. I believe he is saying that he was born in the Midwest. He is taking me back to when he was a little boy. He says he talked to himself all the time. He is showing me a place that was like his special place, like a fort, that he liked to think of as his castle. He was the king, and he would act out battles. He would act these out by playing the parts of all of the soldiers. He would jump over here and be that person. Then he would jump over there and be that person. He would have full conversations about the scenarios playing in his head. Just incredible.

Let me see if I can get him to start talking and see what he wants to share with us. He's referencing his childhood again. He says—I don't know if I'm going to channel him or just relay what he is telling me so I'll just start talking.

“Imagination is one of the greatest gifts, and it's one of the most powerful gifts that you have because you literally are the creator. You create your own world, your own existence. Never downplay or minimize this gift. When someone tells you that it is only your imagination, think of it as a compliment. If you are imagining, you are creating, and that's what you are here to do. You are here to be creators. The power of imagination is what sets us apart. Have fun with it, imagine beautiful things. If you find yourself in a situation that seems intolerable, you can imagine your way out of it. That is how you create, which enables you to move forward. All things start with imagination.

I was so wrapped up in the worlds that I was creating, everything else disappeared. I never cared who was watching or listening. Let your imagination loose. You don't have to be funny, just be beautiful."

He's gone.'

*As he was talking, he was showing me images from his movie, What Dreams May Come.

SUMMARY

Up until this point, I had never requested anyone specific to come in to be channeled, and technically, I didn't make the request; my friend did. When I first connected with Robin Williams, it was electrifying. His Spirit came in strong, and I could literally hear him saying, Nanu Nanu, in my physical ears. His energy also felt joyful, and boy, did he move fast.

Robin Williams was someone I have always admired for his intelligence, wit, and courage to push boundaries. After I recovered a bit from hearing Nanu Nanu, he didn't miss a beat and added, "I do requests." I could feel his playfulness and couldn't help but laugh. My first question to him, requesting he tell me something about himself that I didn't already know, was met with a quick response that I think was tinged with a bit of sarcasm. He said he bit his nails, but I couldn't find any evidence to substantiate it. Perhaps he was just being Robin when he gave me that answer.

After he and I settled down a bit, he shared some real evidence. Robin Williams was born in the Midwest, Chicago, to be exact. When he showed me himself as a little boy, there was almost a sadness when I watched him play because he was alone. I learned that Robin was an only child of wealthy, very busy parents, and that he was left alone a lot.

According to his biography, “Robin,” by Dave Itzkoff, Robin created a special place in the attic or third floor of his home dedicated to his toy soldiers. He organized them by battles and gave each soldier a personalized voice and backstory, improvising elaborate battle scenes, making up characters and stories, and practicing imitations. This use of his imagination and the creation of different voices became the foundation of his comedic genius and is widely seen as an early form of the improvisational style he would later become famous for. I see why this was an important piece of evidence from Robin.

As always, it is important to take note of when a Spirit decides to make contact. Robin came in on February 6, and the only significant correlation I found was that in February 1978, he first appeared on the sitcom Happy Days as a space alien. His appearance was so popular that it led to the series, “Mork and Mindy,” which catapulted Robin’s career.

The message Robin gave us about imagination was beautiful, and I thought so “Robin.”

I found this quote by him that sums this message up nicely:

“Imagination is the beginning of creation.”
